“Everything You’ve Wanted to Know About Arbitrators (But Were Afraid to Ask)”

5. SESSION DESCRIPTION:

Please provide a brief 25-50 word description of the presentation content. Describe the session in promotional terms for the registration brochure.

Whether you are in-house counsel, outside counsel, a client or an arbitrator, you want to know the unknowable: how will an arbitration panel decide a particular issue. Through real-life hypotheticals, and anonymous live polling, participants will have the opportunity to “decide” issues commonly raised in reinsurance arbitrations and then observe in real-time how these critical legal issues are viewed by clients, counsel and, most importantly, arbitrators.

6. DETAILED SESSION DESCRIPTION:

Please provide a detailed (no more than 300 words) description of the presentation content and how you plan to engage participants.

Whether you are in-house counsel, outside counsel or a client, you want to know the unknowable: how will an arbitration panel decide a particular issue? Existing caselaw can be analyzed, but does it serve as an accurate barometer of the on-the-ground thinking that is used in deciding arbitrations? While there is, of course, no way to predict the outcome of a case, wouldn’t it be helpful to have a gut-check on your instincts? And if you are an arbitrator who is confronted with these issues, yet are often constrained from discussing them, wouldn’t you benefit from an open dialogue with your arbitrator colleagues?

This session will present hypothetical arbitration issues for “resolution” by conference participants. The issues to be addressed in the hypotheticals include Bellefonte, accumulation and aggregation, allocation, follow the fortunes, proofs of claim, and others. The hypotheticals are sufficiently detailed to render a meaningful result on voting, but succinct enough to allow meaningful participation without advance preparation by the audience. Through anonymous live polling, each component group of the audience – arbitrators, in-house counsel, outside counsel, and then business people – will then be asked to vote on how they would rule if they were confronted with this issue in an arbitration.

Our Panel is comprised of distinguished outside counsel who have first-hand experience with the arguments on all sides of these issues. Through a robust and fast-paced moderator-led discussion that promotes the open exchange of ideas, the Panel will review the issue, the arguments on each side of the issue and the current state of the law. Most importantly, the Panel will analyze the live-polling results, including reviewing the outcomes, examining the allocation of votes to each potential answer, and comparing the results as rendered by each component group of the audience. The moderators and Panel will invite audience reaction to and participation in this informative and thought-provoking discussion.

7. SESSION LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

Learning objectives are a required component of the submission process so that ARIAS-U.S. can request for continuing legal education credits.

Please state what participants can expect to learn and /or do upon completion of the session in measurable, behavioral terms. Examples of measurable words include: state, list, describe, explain, identify, name, demonstrate, etc. Click here for a link to examples

Please include three to five learning objectives below:

1	Observe and obtain a unique, unfiltered, insight into how key reinsurance issues are viewed by arbitrators.
2	Appraise and compare the live-polling results to participants’ own opinions on the hypotheticals to gain insight and perspective on how arguments on key reinsurance issues are received.
3	Compare and contrast the outcomes of each hypothetical as decided by arbitrators, in-house counsel, outside counsel and clients.
4	Engage in a dialogue with colleagues regarding on-point issues in reinsurance arbitrations.
5	Apply the substantive knowledge gained, whether on the legal issues, arguments or live-polling results, to their own practices.
